J U R O R Jeanne Criscola

Jeanne Criscola is principal of Criscola Design, an award-winning studio focused on social justice and human rights projects. Their work spans decades of publication design created for Soros' Open Society Foundations with one in MoMA's Franklin Furnace Artists' Book Collection. Jeanne's design practice includes objects, experiences, curatorial and exhibition design, and cultural production of books with the imprint OctoberWorks.com. She has exhibited drawings, moving images, installations, generative art, performances, and books in international venues. Her recent book is A Mouth Full: The Re-Cookbook, with Joan Fitzsimmons. Jeanne founded the Ely Center of Contemporary Art in New Haven, and co-founded Else Foundation, a global consortium publishing Else, a peer-reviewed journal of experimental and alternative works, projects, and research. Currently, Jeanne is a Professor of Graphic/Information Design at Central Connecticut State University.
